

UNIVERSITY HAS
INCOME OF $240,000

(Continued from Page One—Column 1.)

the memories of the statesmen who have gone before us. Jefferson, he said, was the most universal genius of the Western Continent.

William S. McKean, secretary of the descendants in the States, presented a beautiful wreath, which had been sent by President Taft to be placed upon Jefferson's tomb. It measured two feet, and was of English Ivy and calla lilies, and contained a large bow of white satin ribbon. In referring to the wreath, Mr. Littleton said that it was a signal and significant act on the part of the President.

On coming down the mountain the descendants stopped in their carriages and watched the placing of the wreath upon the tomb and the planting of a tree just outside the tomb by Amos E. Ball, of Princeton, Pennsylvania, descendant of George Walton, of Georgia.

Alderman's Statement.

Dr. Alderman's statement follows: "The task I set myself at each annual recurring Founder's Day celebration is to make a simple statement of progress. Here is a great university, founded for a great and enduring purpose by a great Commonwealth under the inspiration of a very great man—perhaps the most versatile genius to which our life has given birth. President Elliot, a great modern educator, after his recent tour of the Southern States, has declared that America has not produced a more productive intelligence than Thomas Jefferson. Mr. Jefferson, first of all Americans, perceived clearly three things about education:

"1. That it should be universal.

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"These great principles are cornerstones of thought to-day, but the difficulties which confront us as a result of their application to human needs in a new age are as great as they were when these principles were revolutionary dogmas. As a result of these principles five great problems continually present themselves for consideration to those whose responsibility it is to carry on the life of educational institutions:

"1. It is my purpose to mention each problem, and to indicate what has been done here in the nature of progress in each direction, particularly for the past year. The first problem is to conserve the good and eternal things that have been bequeathed to the life of the institution by the wisdom of the past. Are we doing this? In sobriety of life and conduct, in steadiness of purpose and truth in dignity of demeanor, the University of Virginia of 1908-1909 is the equal of any year of its existence. In the maintenance of order, work, and integrity of standard, I report these facts as follows:

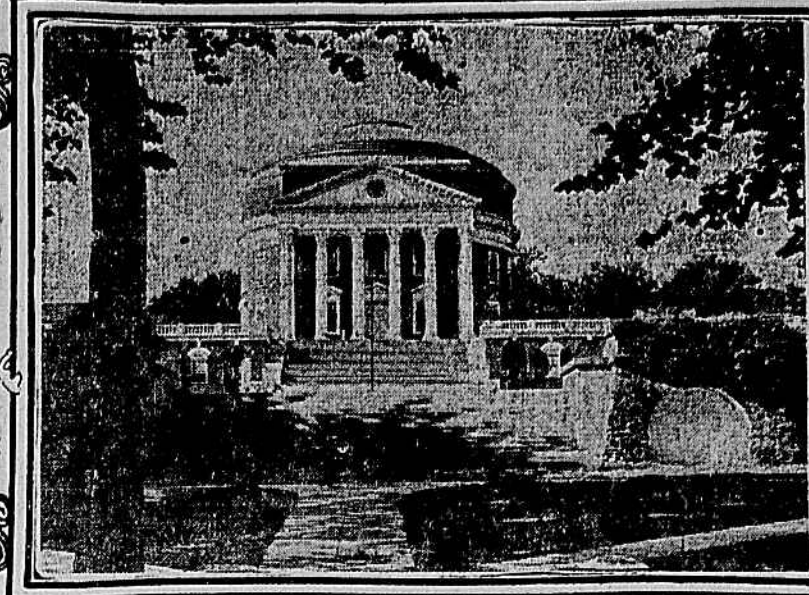

"2. That it influence extends naturally from the top downward.

"3. That it is the historic instrument upon which democracy must depend for moulding its character and determining its destiny.

"FOUNDERS' DAY" AT THE UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA

MONTICELLO, THE HOME OF JEFFERSON.

THE ROTUNDA AT THE UNIVERSITY.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, THE "FOUNDER."

HON. MARTIN W. LITTLETON, of New York, Orator of the "Founder's Day" Program.DR. EDWIN A. ALDERMAN,
President of the University.EAT WHAT YOU LIKE

If Your Digestion Is Good You'll
Enjoy It. If You Don't Enjoy
It, Take a Little Kodol. It
Digests All Food You Eat.

We mean any kind of food. It makes no difference what you may eat—no matter how difficult of digestion your food may be for the stomach, a little Kodol will digest it. A tablespoonful will digest two and a quarter pounds of food easily, and naturally, just as a healthy stomach does. That is why Kodol is so sure to prevent dyspepsia and the many other serious ailments which result from undigested food remaining in the stomach. Indigestion and dyspepsia are always caused by food not properly digested in your stomach. When your stomach cannot properly digest food itself, it needs a little assistance—and this assistance is readily supplied by Kodol. Kodol assists the stomach by temporarily digesting all of the food in the stomach, so that the stomach may rest and recuperate. Kodol is really a very excellent preparation for any digestive disorder. Our guarantee—Get a dollar bottle of Kodol. If you are not benefited—the druggist will at once return your money. Don't hesitate; any druggist will sell you Kodol on these terms. The dollar bottle contains two and a half times as much as the 50c bottle. Kodol is prepared in the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Handsome Dressers, Wardrobes, Chiffoniers and Washstands in Oak, Mahogany, Birdseye and Circassian Walnut. Three-piece Parlor Suits at $17.85 and up.

Excelsior
Gas Ranges

Are known for their excellent qualities. This style at $18 has been the best seller. It is the most perfect gas range in the market. Others at $10, $16 and up.

Heavy China
Matting

Our own importation, 30c per yard; the same grade costs 35c at other stores.

36x72 Floral Matting Rugs, 59c each, usual 75c size.

We Lay All Matting Free.

STURGIS COLLAPSIBLE GO-CARTS
Heywood Hood Carts in brown and natural finish.

Rothert & Company,
Fourth and Broad Streets.

BREAKS A COLD IN A DAY

Mix one-half ounce of Concentrated Pine Compound, which can be procured from your druggist, with two ounces of glycerine and half a pint of good whiskey. Shake it thoroughly and use in doses of a teaspoonful to a table-spoonful every four hours. The Concentrated Pine is a refined pine product for medicinal use, and comes only in a glass bottle, each enclosed in a screw-top case. Relieves in a day.

Save $300
on a Piano and Pianola

Just now we are offering great values in slightly used PIANOS and the famous PIANOLAS.

Read these specials:

OFFER No. 1.—One Christie Piano, upright, with ebony case, and one Pianola to match. Also, nice assortment of music. Original price was $550. Our price..... $235

OFFER No. 2.—One Foster Piano, upright, mahogany case, and one Pianola to match. Also, nice assortment of music. Original price $600. Our price..... $345

OFFER No. 3.—One Haines & Co. Upright Piano, mahogany case, carved, and one Pianola to match. Also, nice assortment of music. Original price $600. Our price..... $330

OFFER No. 4.—One $375 Colby Piano, upright, mahogany case, splendid condition. Our price only..... $235

OFFER No. 5.—One $450 Royal Piano, mahogany, upright, carved, splendid condition. Our price only..... $210

Walter D. Moses & Co.,
103 E. BROAD ST.
Richmond, Virginia.
Oldest Music House in Virginia and North Carolina.

substantially than the University of Virginia in the past five years; but let it be held in mind that universities cannot stand still. Like the waves of the sea they must move onward, or break upon the shore.

Each one of us, therefore, the student in his class-room and in his home, the professor at his desk, the president in his office, and the visitors at their council table, and the hosts of our alumni, far flung about the nation, the Commonwealth of Virginia itself, must needs work together and unceasingly maintain and advance the ancient heritage and the present responsibilities of what I believe to be the greatest educational institution of the Southern States. Greetings have come to us this day from our alumni all over the Union. Their messages encourage us to greater effort, and

I send them everywhere the affection and pride of alma mater."

Pilgrimage of Signers.
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 12.—Nearly 100 members of the Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, now in annual session in Washington, made an excursion to Charlottesville to-day to take part in the exercises of Founder's Day at the University of Virginia and to visit the tomb and home of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello.

Just before the train pulled out a large box of flowers was received from President Taft, with the request that the tribute be placed on Jefferson's grave.

Police Court News.
Henry F. James, Canby, Robert Keys, John Anderson and Pink Fortune, all colored carpenters, appeared before Mayor Maurice yesterday morning and were assessed the usual $2.50. They were caught in the act the night before.

Lewis McCormick and Willie Keys, both white, threw bricks at each other Monday night and paid $2.50 and costs for their fun.

Ed Berry, white, paid the same amount for being drunk and disorderly. He got his mule and left town after paying the fine.

Personals and Briefs.
Charles Angel, of this city, is on a visit to New York.

As the result of a severe blow received while playing baseball, Charles H. Holloway, of Twenty-third and